Topic: When Men Worship
Scripture: 2 Chronicles 5-7.
Now, O my God, let thy eyes be open and thy ears attentive to a prayer of this place. 2 Chronicles 6:40.

The ancient Israelites were not an artistic people. Their religion forbade making graven images, so sculpture, which flourished in Egypt, the Mesopotamian world, and Greece, was discouraged. They left, though, a timeless literature in the Scriptures. What concessions they made to art were in architecture, though their more notable buildings, as the temple of Solomon, the palaces of David and Solomon, and possibly Solomon's stables at Megiddo, were the work of Phoenician architects and masters craftsmen.

David and Solomon lived in a time when such great empires of antiquity as Egypt, Assyria, Babylonia, and the Hittite empire, were in decline. David, whose many faceted talents included military genius, took advantage of the international situation to extend the dominion of Israel over Syria in the north to the brook of Egypt, the present wady el-'Arish, which enters the Mediterranean Sea 50 miles south of Gaza. Solomon extended the empire his father left him, capturing Hamath, a city on the Orontes River 120 miles north of Damascus. The expansion of Israel into an empire and the encouragement of trade with peoples near and relatively far brought great economic prosperity to Israel. Under Kings David and Solomon the nation reached the peak of its worldly glory.

It is to the credit of both David and Solomon that they wanted to use this national prosperity to build a temple to God in Jerusalem, which David had captured from the Jebusites and had made capital of Israel. God denied David the privilege of actual building, but David assembled much fine and valuable material for the projected structure. Solomon, David's son and successor as king, carried out his father's plans and built in Jerusalem and splendid and beautiful temple, reflecting Israel's prosperity and symbolic of the devotion to God the two kings wanted their people to have.

Construction of a temple was an idea David borrowed from foreign lands, just as the people of Israel got the idea for having a king from their neighbors. The peoples antiquity lavished wealth and skill in the construction of fine and beautiful temples. Some of these temples remain, and materials from some may be seen in the great museums of the world. Although the temples of Egypt and Phoenicia, Assyria and Babylonia and Greece had been erected to pagan deities, David thought it appropriate to build the finest temple his nation could afford to the God of Israel in Jerusalem. It should not be overlooked that God had not asked His people to build Him a temple. The temple was man's idea, though God permitted Solomon to build it.

The continuing problem in worship is to allow the form to take the place of the spirit. The problem in the building of a house of worship is that devotion to the structure becomes a substitute for devotion to Him to whom the building is dedicated or the two become intermingled and confused. Religion was to David a spiritual experience, a relationship to God, and building a temple would be the expression of love and gratitude to God. Solomon's prayer at the dedication of the temple, included in the Scriptural background of this week's International Sunday School lesson, reflects a devoutly spiritual religious faith, though he envisions God as making the temple His earthly home. In time the temple came to be to the people a talisman, just as their ancestors in the days of the judges had come to regard the Ark of the Covenant as a talisman, the presence of which would bring them good fortune in the affairs of life.

David's and Solomon's desire to build a magnificent temple reflects a deep love of God. Commendably they wanted God to have the best. They wanted a temple which would stand out among the temples of their day as they believed their God excelled the pagan gods of their neighbors. A beautiful temple and an impressive ritual of sacrifice and worship were the outward expressions of their inner love of God. People today share David's and Solomon's idea, when the splendid and beautiful churches, the great cathedrals and exquisite little chapels, are found throughout Christendom. But the believer has to be on guard against letting the structure substitute for the spirit and the form of worship for the substance of faith.

The Pastor Speaks

THE BIBLE SAYS
"IT IS FINISHED"
St. John 19:30

Plane crews returning from successful air raids during World War II radioed triumphantly to their bases, "Mission Accomplished." With the words from the cross, "It is Finished," our Lord completed the greatest mission this world has ever known.

This mission had been planned by God in eternity. Its nature was revealed to or first parents at their exile from paradise. It began to unfold itself when our Lord assumed infant form at Bethlehem. Now its completion is announced at Calvary.

"It Is Finished." With these words history reached a climax. Appomattox is a place where another page in history reached its climax. Many other great battles have been fought and won. But the greatest was Christ's victory on good Friday. Seeming defeat was converted into triumph. The Lamb of God is now the Prince of Life. His cross becomes his throne.

"It Is Finished." Atonement for the sin of the world is complete. The ransom has been paid in full. God is now reconciled to man by the death of God's son. Nothing remains to be done either by Christ or by us. All is done and is ours by faith. which is created in us by the Holy Spirit.

"It Is Finished." Despite these words men instinctively feel they must contribute something to their salvation. Human pride wishes to be recognized. But Christ says clearly: "It Is Finished."

Thanks, Lord Jesus, that thou has saved also me. Amen.

Nov. 4-9 Set To Clean-Up Appomattox County

Your help is needed in making this year's County Clean-Up Campaign a success. Active participation on your part is the key to making this a worthwhile endeavor. The week of November 4- 9 has been designated as clean-up week for our county. We are encouraging you to clean around your homes and businesses during the week. On Saturday, November 9, we'll culminate our efforts with clean-up alongside our county highways. With the installation of the green landfill containers which are intercepting a large portion of the litter that normally has found its place on our roadsides, it's possible that with a good clean-up campaign, we'll keep our highways and countryside much cleaner. We will be contracting you, your group or organization in the near future with reference to the clean-up campaign. Join in and do your share of the work.

"WE'RE ON THE ENERGY TEAM!"

"As an elected official, I'm working to convince the people in my area we'll benefit from oil drilling and a new refinery near here."

Drilling operations and refineries in new areas can help everyone. They'll help increase much-needed domestic energy supplies, bring many refined petroleum products closer to consumers to help reduce costs, and add to the local economy.

"I'm working to make sure that oil industry exploration and development won't damage the environment while helping the energy situation."

The environmental scientist is an important man in the oil industry today. The industry is going to have to find and produce twice as much oil and gas in the next 15 years as it did in the past 15. It's his job to see that oil companies meet or surpass reasonable environmental standards in the process.

A lot of people are working to solve the energy problem. It's a big job that needs the best efforts of all of us.

To arrange for a speaker on the energy shortage for your group of 25 or more, call (804) 353-2141 or write:
